

Private Law and Gender Equality

Exam Instructions:

The exam for the course Private Law and Gender Equality can be passed in one of the following manners:

- a) Submitting and defending an essay: Students can opt for pre-exam assignments, which would require them to submit a written essay on one of the topics of their choosing, reflecting the contents of the lecturing units. Those opting for the “essay“ form of the exam will decide on a more precise topic, as agreed upon by one of the lecturers, being the student’s supervising professor. Once the student opts for a more precise topic, he/she is required to send the draft version of the essay to the supervising professor. After the topic and the final version of the essay are approved, the said version of the essay should be submitted to the supervising professor. Following that, the student will be obliged to defend his essay orally which would in turn allow him to pass the exam.
- b) Open-book exam: Students can opt for an open-book exam which would require them to apply their knowledge and showcase how well they understand the contents of the course, and whether they can apply the obtained knowledge. To that end, students will be allowed to use any study material and to apply, analyse and compare or explain any given task or practical question while using the knowledge obtained during the course.

Note:

Student’s participation and involvement during the lectures will be taken into account and it may improve the final grade. However, those not participating in the lectures will not in any way be given negative points nor will it affect their final grade negatively.